Leadership

One of the greatest things about leadership is that we all bring something different to the organization. At Security America, we want to hire leaders from the bottom to the top. When we are interviewing candidates, we are looking for people who can not only perform the job they are interviewing for but who can also be groomed to be promoted up our company ladder. All of our current Operation Managers including myself have worked in the field as security officers and have been promoted to our current positions.

Our people are our biggest success as a manpower company providing an important service like security. Security jobs are important as we are there to provide a safe and secure work environment for our clients. Each security officer should lead by example by providing excellent customer service and going above and beyond expectations.

Security America might not tell you every day, but we appreciate all of security officers for what you do for our company. Keep doing what you are doing as leaders of Security America. Keep being proactive while putting a smile on your face that other people certainly recognize. Keep each other engaged with their jobs and push each other to be successful. Your success is our success. Be a leader not a follower.

Welcome Pete Shumiloff as our new Field Manager with Security America effective April 15th. Pete will be overseeing our Northern Division effective May 9th.

Pete is returning to work with Security America as a former Site Supervisor of a large account for us. His previous work experience includes 12 years of military experience with the US Army achieving the rank as a Staff Sergeant and included 4 combat tours. Pete also worked as a manager for a shipping company when he returned from the Army to Morgantown.
